Rainwater in the Streets

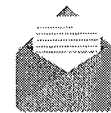

As spring approaches, so does rainy weather. Many catch basin covers are designed to slow the release of rainwater into the storm sewer system to keep it from being overwhelmed. As a result, streets may become temporarily flooded as rainwater gradually drains into the sewer. There are usually catch basins on the opposite side of the street from each other. After a rain event, you can help the water slowly drain into the system by removing any debris from the top of a catch basin but under NO circumstances should anyone open or try to remove the top of the catch basin. Also remember when driving through rain water, proceed with care.
